

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT THE TABERNACLE

President A. H. Lund and Elder Heber J. Grant the Speakers Yesterday.

THE MUSIC WAS EXCELLENT.

Mission of Savior, the Apostasy, Restoration of Gospel and Life of Joseph Smith Spoken Of.

Yesterday's services in the tabernacle in commemoration of the birth of the prophet Joseph Smith, the anniversary of which occurred last Thursday, were marked by a large attendance, which nearly filled the large auditorium. A larger number than usual of the general authorities of the Church were present on the stand, and interesting addresses were given by President Anthon H. Lund, and Elder Heber J. Grant of the council of twelve.

A feature of the musical exercises was the excellent quartet, "O Give Me Back My Prophet Dear," sung by James Monner, Hyrum J. Christensen, David Kirk and the choir. The other hymns were "Praise to the Man" by the choir and congregation, "Sing O Sing the Wondrous Story" by the choir, and "The Restoration of the Gospel," sung by the choir at the close.

John M. Knight of the Ensign state presidency offered the opening prayer and President Joseph F. Smith pronounced the benediction.

President Lund's address dealt with the mission of the Savior, the apostasy which was predicted by the Apostle Paul, the restoration in the last days, which was also predicted by John the Revelator, and the birth and labors of Joseph Smith, the man chosen to fulfill John's prediction.

In Elder Grant's address were discussed a number of impressive reasons for believing in and accepting Joseph Smith as the prophet of the nineteenth century.

There were present of the general authorities Presidents Joseph F. Smith, John R. Winder and Anthon H. Lund. Also Elders J. H. Patten, Heber J. Grant, Rudger Clawson, George S. Richards, Orson F. Whitney and Anthon W. Ivins of the council of twelve.

A synopsis of both addresses follows:

PREST. A. H. LUND.

President Lund said we celebrated the birth of the Savior yesterday, and the birth of the Savior matters little, so that we know that he came and made reconciliation between God and man.

Although his coming was announced and he came to his own, yet they received him not, but for all that the glorious words said in connection with his coming, "Peace on earth, good will to men," have been since repeated by succeeding ages to the present time.

He grew up like men and at the age of 30 years he began his ministry. His doctrines were given to him by the Father, and he was taught by others around him. He summarized the law of God as follows: Love God with all thy heart and thy neighbor as thyself. These two commandments are the basis of all the law. He was crucified for the sins of the world. Death could not hold him, and he was resurrected and he was raised to life again. It was testified to his ascension that he would come in like manner as he had ascended. When he left the earth, the care of the Church rested upon men whom he left to direct its affairs. The Church of Christ and its authorized ministers were then on the earth, and they carried the word to the nations. They, however, looked forward to a general apostasy.

President Lund here read from Paul's epistle to the Thessalonians where he stated that the coming of Christ would not come until there had first been a falling away. Paul also warned Timothy, saying that in the last days perilous times would come. In the 14th chapter of the second of Timothy, Paul also showed that a certain power would arise, make war with the Saints, and overcome them. He was also shown, as recorded in the 14th chapter of the second of Timothy, that through the midst of heaven having the everlasting gospel to preach to those who dwell on the earth. This was for all people and for every nation.

What John predicted above has been fulfilled in the birth of Joseph Smith which occurred 104 years ago last Thursday. His mission was made an instrument in the hands of God to accomplish his purposes in the last days. He was born in Vermont of goodly parents. An examination of his record shows that he was a man of clear vision, that they know it is true. (President Lund here read the testimony of the three witnesses). Some of the witnesses afterwards left the Church, and were dealt with by Joseph Smith, which, if there had been fraud and deception, he would have been afraid to do for fear that the fraud might be exposed. It is a strange thing that all of the three witnesses left away from the Church. Oliver Cowdery asked to come back into the Church, and he had to do the same as any other member would have to do. What could induce Oliver Cowdery to come back if he knew Joseph Smith was a false prophet? He was with the prophet in the revelations of those early days, in the establishment of the Church. If there was anything wrong

In the statements regarding Joseph Smith's life and labors these men would not seek reinstatement. Martin Harris also came back, and while David Whitmer did not do so, he never wavered in his testimony regarding the Book of Mormon.

Present Lund read extracts from Hume's argument against the resurrection, wherein that writer stated that it was less difficult to believe that 12 men were in the tomb than to believe that a man rose from the dead contrary to all human experience. Hence Hume accepted the easiest thing to believe. Still it is hardly credible that 12 men such as the apostles of old, would conspire together to deceive, when it was not to their interest to do so. They had nothing to gain by it, and therefore the world assumes the testimony to be true.

I want to use the same argument in favor of the 12 men who testify regarding the truth of the Book of Mormon. Even when they had nothing to gain they adhered to their testimony, and this in spite of the fact that some of them were excommunicated. The predictions of Joseph Smith and their fulfillment were spoken of, especially the Latter-day Saints, and the gathering of the Latter-day Saints to the Rocky mountains.

His life also bears evidence of his calling. He was loved by his closest to him, many of whom revered him as a man of God. His death also showed the character of the man, his last act being to bless the world with his testimony.

Elder Heber J. Grant said he had always been blessed with a powerful influence in speaking of the life of Joseph Smith. When a boy attending Sunday school he read on a certain voyage of Napoleon's generals were discussed. He said that the great general said that he had no doubt that Christ was the Son of God because of his influence after the lapse of 1,800 years, when men are willing to die for his name today without having any earthly hope of reward.

The same argument may be used regarding the life of Joseph Smith. His followers may with no earthly reward, yet in spite of all this, men are willing to make the same sacrifices to obey the principles he taught after he has been dead over half a century.

Elder Grant said the fact that Joseph Smith's teachings were scriptural was a proof of his divine mission. He also said that the fact that his teachings combined together to work deception and fraud without it is to their interest to do so, which was not the case with Joseph Smith and his associates.

The lives of the Latter-day Saints were referred to as proving that the religion established by Joseph Smith was divine and his authority God-given. The experience of Col. Thomas, who wrote "My Reasons for Leaving the Church of England," was also spoken of. He joined the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and he had thoroughly investigated the same, being led to do it because of the practical results flowing from the establishment of the gospel in the last days.

Elder Grant referred in a very effective manner to the fact that Joseph Smith gathered around him some of the purest and most self-sacrificing men of his time. He gathered them together, the character of the men drawn around Joseph Smith proves him a good man. The love of Willard Richards and John Taylor for Joseph Smith at the time of his martyrdom was also mentioned, as well as the sacrifices made by converts to his teachings, as proof of the divinity of his mission.

The testimony of Parley P. Pratt, Eliza R. Snow and others regarding the character, disposition and talents of Joseph Smith were also spoken of to show that the share of the enemies are without foundation in fact.

Riley's work was also referred to, wherein that writer weakly tries to make out the case against Joseph Smith on the grounds of hereditary epilepsy, after which Elder Grant read copiously from the writings of Josiah Quincy regarding Joseph Smith's work and his forecast of the position he will occupy in the future. Joseph Smith's advice regarding slavery, which had been followed, would have saved millions of dollars and many lives, also was referred to.

The practical working of the religion established by Joseph Smith was also spoken of, and the Latter-day Saints were referred to as supporting their claims that they have the truth. In conclusion Elder Grant bore a strong testimony to the divinity of Joseph Smith's mission.

SHEEP NOT SUFFERING.

Very Little Snow on the Western Desert—Range Feed Good.

Manager A. S. Potts of C. B. Stewart's ranch in Wasatch county makes the following statement relative to conditions in the mountain country:

"On the western desert there is very little snow, little more than a skimming on the flats. In the highlands and foothills there has been a heavier fall, but nothing yet that would cause any serious degree of suffering among the herds. There is just plenty of snow, and the winter range could not be in better condition. The snow in the hills promises good for next year, and there isn't enough in the valleys and flats to do any harm. I haven't heard of any serious losses among the herds, and the sheepmen have met and talked with seem to be thoroughly well satisfied with the present conditions and prospects."

CONCENSUS OF OPINION IS THAT THERE IS NO SHORTAGE OF LABOR.

EMPLOYERS ARE INTERVIEWED

Majority of Contractors Take Umbrage at Advertisement Issued By Real Estate Association.

The recent action of the Salt Lake Real Estate association in advertising in eastern papers that a shortage of labor exists in Salt Lake City has caused a great deal of comment among the local building trades, most of which is of an unfavorable nature. There are those who agree with the action taken by the Real Estate association but the concensus of opinion, as far as The News is able to ascertain, it appears to be that during the past summer, there have been sufficient men for all demands, such as they were.

It is stated by representatives of one or two of the large outside firms who are contracting in the city, that local men are unsatisfactory to some extent. It is said that they are slow, and their employment has raised the cost of these large buildings. This, it is said, is especially noticeable among brick and stone masons, as well as cement workers, and a certain extent among carpenters.

It is pointed out in this connection that work on many of the large buildings is of first class brick masonry, so that at times only a few men were employed, where otherwise there might have been a large number, greatly affecting the labor situation, and causing a shortage.

An thing, it is said there was a shortage of first class brick masons for a while in June. There has also been a demand for metal lathers, as there are only about a dozen men of that class in the city. It is well understood that there has also been a shortage of available plumbers, but that has not been because there were not enough men, but because the plumbers' union is in favor of bringing in the fact that a strike has been in progress during most of the summer.

Mr. Higley, the plumber, is decidedly in favor of the course taken by the Real Estate association. He says the master plumbers have been short of men ever since the strike was started, and if work opened out next year as big as indicated now, the plumbing situation is going to delay construction work if something is not done to remedy it. Mr. Higley says the masters will not pay $6 per day but are determined to stand by the old rate of $20, and the men want just what they started out for there is no likelihood that the break will be patched up. Therefore, Mr. Higley is in favor of bringing in the plumbers from the outside, and personally has become so tired of unionism because of the action of certain members, that he is going to run his shop in the future by employing non-union men. Other plumbers also agree with Mr. Higley as to the desirability of having men brought in from the outside for next year's work.

STRONGLY OPPOSED.

The structural iron worker's union on the other hand, is strongly opposed to the action of the Real Estate association in advertising all over the country that men of all trades are wanted in Salt Lake City at high wages. Business Agent J. E. Munsey, of this union, says that he had 200 men enrolled three months ago, and with the approach of winter this number has been reduced to 154. All of these men are out of work at the present time. Mr. Munsey says there have been plenty of union men here at all times during the present season, and no delays on any of the buildings in course of erection have occurred on account of the shortage of men. There was some trouble because employers refused to give the men $4.50 per day as demanded, but it did not last long. There was at all times plenty of men available. And if there had not been so, Mr. Munsey says he could get all the men wanted at short notice from other cities. He says there is no doubt that the Real Estate association is doing a wrong thing in influencing structural iron workers to come west to Salt Lake City, and that the matter should be left to the business agent of the city. He will see that Salt Lake jobs are not held up on account of a lack of structural iron workers.

A prolonged discussion of this matter took place Friday night at the meeting of the Structural Iron Workers. The meeting was primarily for the election of officers, but the discussion of the Real Estate association's action in advertising for more men for Salt Lake City, claimed the attention of the men for most of the evening. The exclusion of everything else. A number of those present argued for an open door, but others reminded them that as most of the workmen on the jobs in Salt Lake this winter have homes here, the vote was finally recorded against the open door.

F. R. Holton, assistant superintendent of construction for the James Stewart company in this city, is also outspoken against the means being employed by the Real Estate association, though he says there was a shortage of skilled workmen at times last summer. This condition was due, Mr. Holton says, not because of any actual shortage, but because many of the local men were not at or near the top of their trade. For this reason the jobs of the James Stewart company have cost more than was intended. Mr. Holton says the best tradesmen and workmen employed by his company during the past summer have been transients, but he does not consider that any argument in favor of flooding Salt Lake City with a lot of undesirable, as will follow, in his opinion, from the presence of the men of the Real Estate association. As far as the number of men is concerned, Mr. Holton says, there has been no shortage, and that quality is considered there has been a shortage of the most

AN APPEAL TO B. Y. U. ALUMNI.

An appeal to B. Y. U. Alumni, by Prof. Briant S. Hinckley, L. D. S. university:

In the spring of 1876, Karl G. Maeser went to Provo to organize the Brigham Young academy. He was then 45 years of age. For the remainder of his life his heart was in the academy, and his thoughts were inseparably connected with its mission. He died at the age of 73, a poor man, leaving to his family nothing save a name that he had earned by his noble genius. It was the impress of his noble genius. It was in the old academy that he excelled to the full that rare gift of calling forth the best in his students. He was a man of high character, of high energy and high nobility. No boy ever came under the spell of his influence who did not experience an elevation of soul; who was brought to a higher level; who did not receive noble impulses, and have awakened within him a righteous ambition to achieve success. Brother Maeser's work as a teacher, his high-minded and generous attitude toward life, his duties, problems and responsibilities is the most eloquent testimony of his noble character.

The authorities of the school, supported by loyal and enthusiastic alumni, have decided to erect upon one of the most commanding and beautiful sites in the world, a building which shall be known as the "Maeser Memorial Building." This is to be erected as a monument to the life and labors of Dr. Karl G. Maeser. If it answers this end, it must be a good structure, chaste and noble in appearance, full of light, and permeated with an atmosphere of love and truth; it must have about it an air of mingled strength and gentleness; in a word it must be an inspiration to the students, and a fitting monument to the life and labors of the man who has never been lifted into the realm of love and loyalty has come.

Shall we become partners and co-workers with Karl G. Maeser, in that greatest of all human enterprises—man-building? Will we in the light of our circumstances, do the best we can for this cause? Will we entitle ourselves to share the honor and the reward that belongs to the man who gave 25 years in the prime of life to bless us and ours? Is it a sacrifice to leave us bigger and better than it found us. We are not too poor; soul growth is not to be measured by the amount of contribution. The unfortunate man who has never been lifted into the realm of love and loyalty, should receive our profoundest pity. The institution needs our help. The opportunity has come for us to pay the debt of gratitude which we owe, and right loyalty should be the response. Let us do our full share toward erecting a building that shall stand as a shining monument to the memory of Brother Maeser, and as a lasting testimony to the gratitude and generosity of his students.

LOOKS FOR A BIG CROWD.

As a result of the present advertising, Mr. Holton looks for a big crowd of men of all classes to come to Salt Lake next summer, which will, in his opinion, bring about the same conditions that existed in Seattle. Many of these men will prove to be the "riff-raff," and while they will eventually be weeded out and move on, their importation is likely to be followed by a period of lawlessness and disorder.

Some of the men of course will stop here and make their homes, but those who fail to get employment will tend to offset this advantage by giving the city a bad name wherever they go. Mr. Holton also says there are too many Japs here in Salt Lake, for the good of the city, and if the Real Estate association could help to remedy this, and induce contractors to give a preference to men having homes here, it would be a step in the right direction and help to induce more of them to settle here, and thus build up the city.

D. R. Smith, who is in charge of the construction work on the Vermont building, says he was short of bricklayers last June, and there was a shortage of metal lathers for a short time, but generally speaking there have been plenty of men to do the work. The only shortage that troubled him was that of more men for the Salt Lake labor market, and they decided on the plan of advertising in the eastern papers as the best means of securing them. He says that the Salt Lake City is fast growing up. Mr. Perkes says any objections to this method will be considered if presented to the association, the next meeting of which will take place at the Commercial club next Wednesday noon.

MR. PERKES'S SIDE.

In reference to the advertising plan now being followed by the Real Estate association, Secy. J. L. Perkes says the association considers there is a real need of more men for the Salt Lake labor market, and they decided on the plan of advertising in the eastern papers as the best means of securing them. He says that the Salt Lake City is fast growing up. Mr. Perkes says any objections to this method will be considered if presented to the association, the next meeting of which will take place at the Commercial club next Wednesday noon.

ROBBED BY THREE MEN.

While Napolopolis, of 122 west Fourth South street, was asleep Sunday night, three masked and armed robbers broke down the door of his room, and as Napolopolis jumped from his bed he was covered with two big revolvers and ordered to throw up his hands. He complied with the order and while two men held revolvers on him, the third took a money belt worn by the victim containing $95, and made off with it. The robbery was reported to the police, but they were unable to get a good description of the men as they were masked.

SECOND DUEL VICTIM DIES OF HIS WOUNDS

Special Policeman Emil Glaser Escapes Trial for Murder When Death Overtakes Him.

Special Policeman Emil Glaser, who engaged in a pistol duel with M. Vaccarilli, in front of the Olympia saloon, 658 west Second South street on the morning of Dec. 7, died at St. Mark's hospital Sunday morning following an operation to remove pus from one of his lungs. Glaser died about 10 o'clock. He had practically recovered from the wounds but pus gathered in his lungs and he contracted pneumonia as well. The physicians decided to operate to remove the pus but Glaser failed to rally from the shock and his suffering ended in death.

FUNERAL OF ROBT. MEWAN.

Old Time Printer Laid to Rest After Comforting Services.

The funeral of Robert Mewman was held Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock from the residence of his step-daughter, Mrs. D. J. McBride, at 831 Tenth East street, where her father had resided for a number of years. The services were in charge of Bishop George Arbuckle of Emerson ward, assisted by the Rev. J. H. Badger. The words of the various speakers were of a nature to give much comfort to the mourners who, together with friends, made up a large congregation. The deceased came to Salt Lake about 10 years ago, and for years was connected with the composing room of The Herald.

FUNERAL OF CARTOONIST.

"Cal Callahan" Laid to Rest Yesterday In City Cemetery.

The funeral of "Cal Callahan," the cartoonist who died of tuberculosis Christmas day at the L. D. S. hospital, was held Sunday afternoon from the Taylor undertaking establishment, the internment being in the city cemetery. Herman Ackerman, his real name, was 27 years old at the time of his death. Three sisters in Oakland, Cal., and one in Salt Lake, Mrs. Alvin Jensen, survive.

The fame of "Cal," which pen name he assumed early in his career, spread from coast to coast. Particularly was he well known as the originator of sporting cartoons. His greatest success, however, was attained in a series of cartoons on the famous outlaw, Harry Tracy, at the time that desperado was terrorizing the northwest after having escaped from the Oregon penitentiary.

"Cal," during his short life, was connected with many of the papers of the west. He worked in Denver, Salt Lake, Butte, Seattle and San Francisco.

FUNERAL OF W. O. HEDRICK.

The last rites over the body of W. O. Hedrick were held Saturday afternoon at the Evans undertaking chapel, under the auspices of the James McKeon post of the G. A. R. The deceased was a victim of asthma, from which he had suffered for a long time at his home, 217 south Second West street, where he died Wednesday night. The burial took place in the city cemetery, and was attended by many friends and relatives. Rev. T. S. Hare of Ogden spoke highly of the deceased. There were many most beautiful floral offerings for this faithful veteran of the Civil war.

How One Doctor Successfully Treats Pneumonia.

"In treating pneumonia," says Dr. W. J. Smith of Sanders, Ala., "the only remedy I use for the 'chills' is Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. While, of course, I would treat other symptoms with different medicines, I have used this remedy many times in my medical practice and have never failed to find a cure where it has been controlled the trouble. I have used it myself as has also my wife, and I can truly say that it is a most reliable and cheerful recommendation it is superior to any other cough remedy I have ever known."
